Arkansas First to Pass New District Conservation Law

Authorizes Farms to Group Together for Protection of Soil

MORE FEDERAL AID

Government Can Do More Through Formally Organized Districts

LITTLE ROCK.—Passage of the Soil Conservation Districts Law by the Arkansas Legislature puts the state in a position to secure full co-operation from the federal government for carrying out of erosion and flood control programs throughout the state, according to a statement made here by J. W. Sargent, state coordinator of the Soil Conservation Service.

"The Arkansas bill is based on a standard state soil conservation districts law which was drawn and approved by the Department of Agriculture as the type of state legislation that would be acceptable to the Department in order to receive Federal aid in conducting a program of soil and moisture conservation in the states," Mr. Sargent said.

"The fact that Arkansas is the first state to pass such legislation puts it in a most admirable position to receive the full benefit of all federal help which may be made available through the Department of Agriculture for the control of erosion and lessening of flood hazards in the major stream watersheds of the state."

Wallace's Statement

Mr. Sargent pointed to the following statement made this week by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace as evidence of the necessity of proper state legislation in order to receive full benefit of federal co-operation in soil and moisture conservation work:

"Last summer the United States Department of Agriculture reached the conclusion that it was foolish to spend large sums of money setting up soil conservation projects unless we could be certain of more untimely co-operation by farmers and landowners in the different localities. Of course, this more untimely co-operation could be obtained only by invoking state authority. The federal government can, however, withhold benefits and services from those states which do not pass laws making possible the right kind of co-operation."

"The passage of such legislation," Secretary Wallace continued, "really means that state authority is provided to the district to enforce participation in a soil conservation program on any minority of non-co-operators. The federal government can then spend money on a district set up in this way with some assurance that a real job can be done to check and absorb heavy rains at the headwaters before they have a chance to join the swollen streams. But in no case will the work be started until the majority of the people have given their assent and have said that they want the help of the government."

In expressing pleasure at the foresight of Arkansas legislators for putting Arkansas in a position to co-operate fully with the federal government in the nation-wide fight against erosion, Mr. Sargent explained that hundreds of farmers living outside of present Soil Conservation Service projects and camp areas in the state have expressed a desire for the technical direction of the Service in instituting erosion control programs on their own farms.

Must Include All

"While much good has already been accomplished in project and camp areas," Mr. Sargent stated, "it is evident that the problem of erosion control cannot be solved entirely by work in more or less isolated areas. For the problem to be adequately dealt with, all the erodible land in every watershed must be brought under some form of erosion control. Information and direction of activity by technically trained soil conservationists must be made available to all those farm owners or operators who are now outside of project or camp areas if we are finally to arrive at the desired goal of having all the land in any given watershed or watersheds under a coordinated erosion control program."

"Some headway in this direction has been made by the spread of erosion control practices to numerous individual farms as a result of field work done by various agricultural agencies. While none can deny the value of this work, I am confident all will agree this is a slow process that can hardly be expected to overcome in a state-wide way the ever increasing rate of erosion."

"However, with the passage of this bill it will be possible for groups of farmers interested in erosion control to form districts for the carrying out of co-ordinated soil and moisture conservation measures with the co-operation of State and Federal agricultural agencies," Mr. Sargent said.

NEW CHAMPION OF UNCLE SAM'S FIGHTING EAGLES

Bristling with guns and bulging with bombs, the U. S. Army's new flying fortress arrived at Langley Field, Va., from the Pacific coast. Above it is poised on the runway with all four of the 450-horsepower motors whirling three-bladed propellers, the most formidable fighting eagle in Uncle Sam's eyrie.

'Company Unions' Enter Labor Fight

Three-Way Battle Between Them and A.F. of L. and Lewis' Group

By the Associated Press

The end of a week of momentous developments in the field of industrial unionization saw a quickening Saturday of the struggle for control of labor. In the steel industry, leaders of the so-called "company unions" joined the battle in which the major controlling forces heretofore have been the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization (CIO).

Recognition of CIO as the sole bargaining agent for its members in the Carnegie Illinois Steel corporation gave Lewis' supporters an early advantage, but their force quickly mapped a counter-offensive.

Passengers Ships Return to Rivers

Barges Carrying More Freight, and Now Passengers Increase

By TOM HORNER

Associated Press Correspondent ST. LOUIS.—(AP)—"Steamboat a-comin'!"

"Steamboat 'round the bend!" These joyful shouts, which once announced the arrival in sleepy Mississippi river villages of the picturesque stern and side wheelers, may soon herald the return of river craft to glory and profits.

"No longer an idle dream," says Captain Donald T. Wright, "but an imminent reality is the return of passenger boats to the Mississippi and the Ohio." Wright, who is editor of "The Waterways Journal," says river men report a steadily increasing demand for passenger accommodations. Plans for luxurious "tourist steamers" already are under way and groups of capitalists are considering proposals to build them.

Wright says barge lines are carrying more freight today than in the brightest period of river traffic.

For proof of the renewed interest in passenger travel, he cites the successful seasons of an excursion boat operating out of St. Louis, and of another in service between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

"Romance still lives on the river," Wright maintains. "The world is hungry for the gaiety and color typified by the river boat period." He does not envision an immediate boom but declares that with the completion of the nine-foot channel from New Orleans to Minneapolis, and the elimination by government-constructed dams and locks of high and low extremes on the river, passenger trade may be expected to increase to a par with freight traffic.

Passenger business, which has dropped to almost nothing, began its decline in the late 80's with the advance of the railroads into the west. The decrease was accelerated by operation difficulties. Before government engineers tied Old Man River in his bed, unexpected channel shifts made steamboating hazardous work. Wrecks were numerous and the resulting financial losses bankrupted many lines.

School Enumeration Dates to Be Changed

The date for the annual school enumeration, scheduled for March 10 to 30, has been changed by senate bill No. 69 of the Arkansas legislature, E. E. Austin, county school examiner, said Saturday.

Mr. Austin said the new dates would be announced soon by the State Board of Education. The change of dates was caused by the recent floods in eastern Arkansas, Mr. Austin said.

Government City of Aranjuez Bombed; Madrid Girds Defense

Many Dead During Night of Terror in Provincial Town as Rebels Gather for New Assault on Capital

By the Associated Press

MADRID, Spain.—(AP)—Many persons were believed dead Saturday in the government-held city of Aranjuez after a night of terror in which insurgent planes, making repeated visits, dropped more than 50 bombs.

The attacks on Aranjuez, which started at the dinner hour Friday night and lasted intermittently until after 2 a. m. Saturday, were the most severe of a series in the broad semi-circle of insurgent air raids on the central Spanish front.

Madrid expects attack. Government barricades were reinforced Friday amid an artillery duel on the Madrid front as defense commanders braced their forces for an expected mass attack.

The high command reported the besieging insurgent forces were preparing for another attempt to pierce the capital's defenses. They said scattered attacks against defense garrisons probably signaled an insurgent search for weak spots.

Dark, misty weather enforced a calm along the siege lines and gave the Madrid command confidence the insurgent bombardment would cause little damage.

Leftists Advance Slightly. Government troops were reported to have taken the initiative in an attack west of El Escorial, advancing about a mile in the vicinity of Robledo de Chavela, on the front northwest of the capital.

Government artillerymen also shellied what was believed to be a concentration of insurgent tanks and artillery near El Pardo, north of Madrid, and a bombardment was reported from Toledo.

The few refugees in the officially-closed United States embassy building were put on bread ration for the first time. Each was given half a large loaf for the day.

Canadian Premier Meets Roosevelt

MacKenzie King and President Talk Over Border Relations

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Premier W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada sat down in the White House Friday night for a discussion of world affairs but the details of their conference were kept secret.

On his arrival here at the invitation of the president, King said their conversations would cover matters of "mutual interests to the United States and Canada."

The president told his press conference he and the Canadian premier would discuss world affairs. Observers, who believe the administration soon will renew efforts to negotiate a St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada, saw possibilities that this project would be threshed out.

At the Canadian legation, where King greeted newspapermen, he declined to comment on the significance of his visit. He did not know, he said, what the president wanted to discuss.

King smiled when interviewers reminded him that former President Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald, once prime minister of England, had set a precedent in international intercourse by sitting on a log at the Hoover summer camp in Virginia in 1929 to talk of naval disarmament. The premier said he expected to follow the Roosevelt precedent of sitting on a sofa.

"That is where he sat to talk when I visited him in 1935," the Canadian said.

2,264 Car Licenses in County to Date

Number of Local State Tags Compares Favorably With Last Year

Ed Van Sickle, state revenue agent, announced Saturday that 2,264 license tags had been issued for automobile and trucks in Hempstead county. He said this figure compared favorably with the number issued to the same date last year.

Mr. Van Sickle said he expected the number of licenses to reach 2,300 after July when the second half of the year started. A number of truck licenses are issued at that time when watermelons and other farm products begin to move to the market.

Weaving Revival Appears in State

Old-Fashioned Wheel Is Brought Out in 21 Arkansas Counties

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—The old fashioned spinning wheel is whirling again in Arkansas farmhouses in a revival of the art of weaving. Miss Sybil D. Bates, extension specialist in home industries, says farm women are finding the spinning wheel and loom sources of added income and greater pleasure in the home.

Pioneer weaving instruments, unused since Civil War days, have been brought out of their storage places and reconditioned, she says. Some have bought their equipment new. Others, more industrious, have made their own.

As a result of the sudden increase in popularity, the extension service, in co-operation with the University of Arkansas college of agriculture, is sponsoring demonstrations in spinning and weaving in 21 counties.

Timely Tips on Income Tax

Cheerful Giver Rewarded by Deduction Allowances for Contributions, Up to a Certain Limit.

This is the fourth of six articles on deductions the average taxpayer may make in his federal income tax returns.

By NEA Service

Perhaps the most pleasant deductions you can make on your income tax return are those based on what you have given away. But be careful. All the money you may have given away during the past year isn't necessarily deductible. The money you may have passed out to panhandlers on the street, or the $5 check you sent to Cousin Ed that time he was in a spot, do not count as contributions under the income tax law.

Only those to recognized organizations are counted, as it would be hard to check up on casual benefactions to individual people.

Purpose: Important. The organization you have given to must be operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to animals or children.

If most of the organization's activity consists in lobbying or propagandizing, your contributions are not deductible.

And in any case, if any part of the income of the organization goes to private stockholders or individuals, it's no go.

That doesn't refer to charitable organizations like the Red Cross, which may distribute funds to individuals. Community fund contributions, for

Changed Railroad

SCOTT BLUFF, Neb.—(AP)—F. T. Darrow of Lincoln once changed the course of a railroad to avoid a pioneer woman's grave.

When Darrow surveyed the Burlington route through North Platte valley in 1899 he ordered the survey line "backed up" and changed to prevent its cutting through the grave of Rebecca Winter, who was buried in 1850. She had been a member of a wagon train party in the Mormon migration to Salt Lake City. For many years her grave was marked only by a wagon iron but later monuments were erected.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Looks like Tennessee might let whisky go tax-free for another year or so, and keep on fining people for buying gasoline and cigarettes. The legislature's about to put a tax on everything from postage stamps to thoughts.

Maybe nobody else has thought of it, but it's funny how bank tellers can count so fast when they cash your check, and take so much time fiddling around recounting when you deposit a few dollars. Snow around here has made peach blooms sorry they got in such a hurry.

PLYMOUTH, Eng.—(AP)—Frank Vosper, gifted English actor-playwright returning from Hollywood, vanished Saturday from a gay journey's-end champagne party aboard the Europe-bound liner Paris in circumstances baffling both to Scotland Yard and to his beauty-queen hostess, Miss Muriel Oxford, "Miss Great Britain" of 1936.

U. S. Protectorate for Philippines

Little-Known Fact Brought Out by President Quezon of Islands

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—It took one of the strangest of dinners to bring into the open one of the least discussed but most widely held concepts: That when the Philippines are free they nevertheless will remain a de facto protectorate—a sort of American Belgium.

The dinner was the meeting of the National Association of the Carabao (water buffalo), composed of veterans of the Philippine occupation and invasion. What lent it special significance was the presence there of President Manuel Quezon of the Philippine republic.

Pittman Replies. That pint-size diplomat and politician spoke straight from the shoulder to 200 or more men, many of them now colonels and generals who once had fought him, and they liked him more for it than they ever liked him or his race before. In English exact but staccato, he told them that even after full Philippine independence is obtained there will be "bonds of friendship" stronger even than existing ties. Simply he was stating that Philippine independence wouldn't mean a thing without United States guardianship.

Senator Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, although not an official spokesman of the government, made the reply. He couched it in diplomatic language, at which this miner-lawyer-politician has become proficient. But in effect he said: "All right, little fellow. If you see yourselves getting in trouble give us a word and we'll see what can be done about it."

Labor and the U. S. Incidentally another unusual relationship—that between labor activities in the field and governmental activities here—often escapes the casual eye. Note this: When last spring there was big talk of labor trouble in the coal fields, administration leaders pushed the revision of Cuffey bill.

When the General Motors strike was on, the senate labor spy investigation was whipped up to new activity and turned on General Motors Corporation itself.

While John L. Lewis has been talking steel organization, the National Labor Relations Board has been hearing testimony on alleged infractions of the Wagner labor act by Carnegie Steel.

When Lewis turned his attention to negotiating a new coal wage agreement, the Carnegie hearing suspended two weeks and house committees began consideration of the revised Cuffey coal bill.

Before Lewis again turns his attention to organizing steel, Isador Rubin, will publish a study on company unions.

It is not all coincidence.

Federal Jurist, as Governor, Relieved Road Debt in 1927

Sponsored Famous District Debt Compromise in Campaign of 1926

DEFEATED TERRAL

Martineau Always a Judge, Except for Two Years as Governor

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Federal Judge John Ellis Martineau, 54, former governor of Arkansas, died Saturday after a several-week illness.

Death occurred at 10:33 a. m. He had been ill since January with influenza, which was complicated by an heart ailment.

Federal Judge Heartill Ragon of the western Arkansas district, who was holding court here Saturday, said Judge Martineau, who presided over the eastern district, was advised of his death a few minutes after it occurred while he was hearing motions, and immediately adjourned court.

Funeral arrangements were not immediately made.

Judge and Statesman

Except for the less than two years he served as Arkansas' governor, John E. Martineau spent his entire career as a judge, serving with distinction for half a generation as the Federal chancery judge in Little Rock, and then as judge of the federal eastern Arkansas district.

He had the unusual fortune of being appointed to the federal bench by a Republican president, Herbert Hoover, though himself a noted Democrat.

Despite his long service in the judiciary, Judge Martineau was the greatest renown with a brief and spectacular appearance in the governor's office.

In 1924 Arkansas' farms had against them a crushing public debt for the construction of gravel highways. Despite the appeal for relief of the old road improvement districts, Tom Terral was elected governor in that year on a platform to prohibit the state assuming any part of this debt.

Two years later, in 1926, Judge Martineau quit the security of his Federal chancery bench and entered the Democratic primary campaign against Terral, who was seeking his second term.

Martineau Act

Martineau outlined a platform which would effect a compromise, the state assuming the road district debts thus relieving farmlands of any improvement tax, and constructing new highways in those counties which had no district debt to be relieved of.

Martineau defeated Terral by 16,000 votes. The Martineau Act of 1927 took the road improvement tax off farmlands, and at the same time launched the all-weather-highway program, which today makes it possible to reach any county-seat in Arkansas regardless of the weather.

Had not the Martineau Act, or some similar drastic action, been adopted before the 1929 panic set in, it is the opinion of economic observers that wholesale tax foreclosures would have occurred in road districts all over the state, the road improvement tax in some instances running $20 a year against 320-acre farms.—W.

Here's Ship That Never Came Home

Draws 23 Feet of Water, But Her Home Port Has Only 6 Feet

LONDON.—(AP)—A Hungarian ship never has been to its home port and never can go. It is the cargo steamer Csikos—too big to get into its own harbor.

Captain Tuloki, of Budapest, the master, explained the situation on a voyage here.

"The Csikos, 7,600 tons, was built in 1913 in Sunderland by a British firm. She was registered in Budapest, but can certainly never go there since she draws 23 feet of water and there is only six feet in the Danube at Budapest."

"We have an agreement with Italy to use Fiume as a home port, but this is of little use, on account of difficulties in crossing Yugoslav territory. "So we tour the world, visiting North and South America, and all parts of Europe, transporting coal and grain."

I'd like to leave but daffodils to mark my little way.
To leave but tulips red and white behind me as I stray.
I'd like to pass away from earth and feel I'd left behind
But roses and forget-me-nots for all who come to find.
I'd like to see the barren spots with all the flowers of earth,
To leave a path where those who come should find but gentle mirth.
And when at last I'm called upon to join the heavenly throng
I'd like to feel along my way I'd left no sign of wrong.
And yet the cars are many and the hours of toil are few;
There is not time enough on earth for all I'd like to do;
But having lived and having toiled, I'd like the world to find
Some little touch of beauty that my soul had left behind.—Selected.

Yes, I am aware of the fact that I have used this one of my favorite poems twice before, but looking out my window, I can see so many beautiful flowers, marking the way my mother, left behind as she passed away from earth, and others I have added to mark my little way, and look into my neighbors and friends yards, and find the same trail of beauty, the above poem always comes into my mind, and just at this time, when our town seems to be in the grip of the golden daffodil, and the pure whiteness of the narcissus, following close on the beauty of the jonquils and the early spring and bright warmth of all old-fashioned flowers, that grow without much, if any cultivation, all they want is half a chance to flaunt their beauty to the world; it seems to me the poet who penned the above lines must have watched an old-fashioned garden giving a touch of beauty that some soul had left behind. The above has only been leading up to my real subject, which is flowering shrubs on the highway, the trees were necessary to form the sky line as it were, but California and Florida did not sell themselves on trees, but climate, and a wonderful development and display as to what their climate will do is their main asset; go into either state and the first thing they call your attention to is their wonderful flowers and shrubs. I have driven the full length of both states, and have found no beauty in flowers so great that we could not match it our own state by putting forth the effort that they do; they have plenty of climate but nothing like the soil we have, and to the average Northerner or Easterner, we could make a wonderful appeal by planting flowering shrubs on our highways.

Quins' Bucket Brigade on 5-Alarm Snow Call

"Here we come!" No challenge from winter is too much for the quintuplets, and they leave the security of their nursery porch for a real winter outing. Who is this in the lead, bucket in one hand, shovel in the other? None other than Yvonne. Next, gingerly starting down the steps, is Marie, half hiding Annette. At left on the porch is Emilie, apparently marking time until she finds the best way to carry her equipment. Last is Cecile, at right, but she might explain that "tomorrow you will see us all playing right in the snow!"

WITH THE LADIES

The code for young girls which Magistrate Mark Rudich of Brooklyn laid down for 19-year-old Margaret Muntyan may cause Joseph Muntyan to let his daughter go out to swim or walk or dance, but the ultimatum does not herald the beginning of a great crusade.

Not by ten lipsticks or one stopped clock! When the 19-year-old girl complained of her father's restrictions to the general judge he ruled that she may smoke cigarettes without being marked as an outcast by her parents; that she may meet the boys she knows outside her home if her father won't leave the latchstring out for them; and that she needn't leave the party at 11 o'clock just when the orchestra is getting good.

That's all right for Margaret and her friends. Their parents will have to obey because the sample case occurred at home.

Fathers Refuse to Lose Reins
Fathers, in general, though, reading the verdict will continue to be have exactly as they have always done. Those who are old-fashioned will keep the reins as tightly drawn around their Marys and Betyss and Violetas. Those who believe that young people have rights on occasions where there is no question of evil-doing—will continue to be as liberal as ever.

It is hard for a father to realize that a daughter has reached the age where he no longer figures much in her extramural contracts. It may be love, or a lessening of power or influence, or the perfectly natural fear that something unforeseen may happen, which makes a father hesitate to let go the reins. However, when a girl is 19 there are some matters which have become her personal problems; and her father, though she would fight with him against the whole Supreme Court, must release his authority.

In "A Million," the spectacular musical smash that thrillingly glorifies the girl in a million, lovely Sonja Henie, comes Sunday and Monday to the Saenger. With a hundred gorgeous girls in sensational ice-revels amid a dazzling winter wonderland of breath-taking beauty, it's the wonder show of 1937 with a cast in a million that includes, in addition to Sonja Henie, the Queen of the Silvery Skates, Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, New Sparks, Don Ameche, the Ritz Brothers, Arline Judge, Borrah Minevitch and his gang, and Dixie Dumbear.

After all, having a daughter refrain from the make-up which would accentuate her pretiness just at the time when it's important to be pretty, having her give up the merriest and mirth which is her natural heritage just at the age when worry is a nebulous quality—having a daughter give you forced obedience can't mean much to a father.

Won't Foster Understanding
A judge's verdict certainly is of the utmost significance to Margaret Muntyan, but it can accomplish little as a basis for real understanding. Her father will grant her the rights of youth because he is compelled to do so. True, in time he may come to realize how selfish he has been, in which case the verdict will have served a too old purpose.

A father and mother should so prove their parenthood that they need not fear for their children's behavior when they become 19 and 29 and 39. After all, Mr. Muntyan's dictatorship in Margaret's life isn't a permanent thing, and if he is wise he will realize that early in life she ought to have a vote in her own plans, when they do not go contrary to her own well-being. When he is so prejudiced that he confuses freedom with license than by all means, the court should step in. A girl, even a 19-year-old one, has

Oil and Textiles Next Labor Move

Lewis Points to C. I. O's Political Power in Pennsylvania

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON—John L. Lewis's Committee for Industrial Organization, looks upon its contract with the mighty steel industry as "open sesame" to a labor reservoir filled with 25,000,000 unorganized workers.

Says a spokesman for the 15 labor unions in the Lewis group: "If the biggest company in the United States Steel corporation is willing to bargain collectively with an 'outside' union, then the rest of the mass production industries will fall in line one by one."

Oil and Textiles Next
This enthusiasm said the next objectives of the CIO would be the million workers in the oil industry, including the filling station men, and the million toilers in the nation's textile factories.

True, he admitted, the CIO has made concessions to the great industrialists who run steel and automobile manufacturing, but they did not concede their one central theme—unmolested collective bargaining rights.

With that theme song, they believe they can organize any mass production group in good time.

That supreme confidence explains why the usually roaring John L. Lewis was willing to scale his voice down to a whisper.

He also has in the back of his head the continued massing of power for labor in the political field.

Just before the Carnegie-Illinois steel unit of the Steel corporation made peace with the CIO affiliate, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, Lewis told The Associated Press feature service:

"We will win industrial democracy for the American worker, all right. We must have collective bargaining, of course, but also we must wield political influence before we gain our ends."

While he was speaking, labor's non-partisan league (which he directs) was bolstering its staff in Washington for its early March convention. The league plans nation-wide expansion.

as much right to use lipstick as a boy does to raise a moustache if he can. The deciding factor about the lip rouge should be whether or not it enhances the girl's charm.

While no magistrate would condone an all-night party ending in a marriage license booth somewhere, he is wise enough to know that the quickest way to bring one to pass, is to deny youth its natural outlets for laughter and happiness. A girl, afraid to go home, is a thousand times more likely to go on and on and on, than one whose father understands that everyone was having such a good time the party didn't break up until half-past one.

Anteater Records Dear to Americans

Army of Research Workers Kept Busy in D. A. R. and Congress

By STUART ALLEN
Associated Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Americans have become so interested in anteaters that they have a small army of specialists peering into the animal's digestive up family tree and its economic cost-of-living.

The capital seems to be the busy hunting grounds for family trees in case of two huge references in the subject: one at D. A. R. headquarters, the other in the Library of Congress.

Neither library will promise a gratis, but refers inquiries to the genealogists that live in Washington who will gladly dig out the family tree for $1 an hour. Once the tree is completed, the cost of arms is easily identified, and it can be easily colored for $15.

Many Difficulties
The irritating turns that a search for anteaters can take are legion. For instance, an Iowa family may trace back to a John Hendricks who emigrated from Virginia for the Revolutionary War. But the records may show that he was also such a John (one in 1780 and one in 1781). Which John was it?

How do you want your family tree? You can have it drawn like a real tree. The first part of a name is placed on the roots, and all his descendants become branches and leaves. Or you can have his name stand at the top with his descendants falling down the paper like a steel frame-work.

A great many trees have been finished. The D. A. R. have 25,000 names and pamphlets of the families, and one of their most illustrious members has been able to trace 15 family trees to which she belonged. She wears 23 shining, little bars on her breast at D. A. R. functions.

If the sun suddenly ceased to exist, all the planets would be pulled toward the planet Jupiter, and would continue their revolving around it.
